PREFACE

I HAVE compiled, so far as I have been able, a record through seven generations of the one branch of the Huyett family and collateral lines. However, in the main, this work pertains to the Huntingdon County family and their homestead, "Stone Hall."

Of necessity, as in every case of a genealogy so long and where the family has been so numerous, there are many omissions, and, undoubtedly, there are mistakes, but I have done the best that I could do under the circumstances.

As for the sources of this volume I have made use of printed matter of all kinds, written materials, family records, pictures and portraits, interviews and conversations without number.

Among the published items that have been helpful are The Huyett Family Bulletin, published 1926; J. Simpson Africa's History of Huntingdon and Blair County, published 1883; and J. Thomas Scharf's History of Western Maryland.

In the preparation of this material all those contacted have been most kind and cooperative, but I especially wish to thank the following for their interest and assistance: Mrs. Vaneeta R. Huyette, Philadelphia, Pa., Mr. S. Louis Huyette, Philadelphia, Pa., Mrs. Maud McKean, Altoona, Pa., Dr. E. E. Neff, Altoona, Pa., Mrs. Carrie Sener, Baltimore, Maryland, and the Reverend Charles A. Huyette, Alexandria, Pa.

CHAPTER I

THE HUYETT NAME

This family name, a continental one, is traced from America to France, where the spelling was originally Huet. In that country the word meant an "owlet," being the diminutive form of "chouette," an owl. A characteristic of the origin of many surnames, as can be readily seen, is that the sound suggests the sense. Hewett and Hewitt are anglicized forms of the French Huet, while Huyette is a modern version, and, in a measure, is closer to the French origin of the name. Indicating their Gallic background, the English families have emblazoned on their coat armor owls and owlets. Other spellings are as follows: Hewat, Hewatt, Hewet, Huit, Huyet, and Huyett. In Spain a branch of the family writes the name as de Heute.

Many centuries ago in France the Huets lived in Alsace and Orleans, while the earliest sources show that they were living in Normandy before 1520. Moreover, it is interesting to note that in the seventeenth century the name Huet is included among the nobility of this province. Today in France the name is met with frequently in all parts of the country.

Found in the colonial records variously spelled is the name of one of the earliest known American ancestors, Franz Carl Huyett. Among the different spellings are Franc Carl Huyett, Franz Carl Huyet, Franz Carl Huget, and Frans Carel Hoeyer. A son of the founder of the family signed his name Ludwig Huet. A grandson of this first immigrant, John Huyett, Sr., one-time treasurer of Huntingdon County, wrote his name John Huyet. Furthermore, the surname written as Huyet occurs occasionally on the early gravestones of the members of the clan. Be this as it may, the colonial generations in keeping with the simplicity of the day seemed uniformly to have used the briefer form of the spelling as the preferred one.

For the sake of consistency the spelling throughout this work will be Huyett except where it is known that members of this family are accustomed to writing the name with a final "e."

Through the passing centuries the Huyett name has been an honorable one, borne by those who have placed ideals and principles above expediency and worldly gain. Regardless of their walk in life the Huyetts have had a sense of tradition and a pardonable pride in the knowledge that their ancestors came from France and were of the Huguenot faith. In the wilderness, to which they came as pioneers, they created homes for themselves and played their part in making possible the liberties which are now our heritage.

CHAPTER II

THE COLONIAL ANCESTOR

Franz Carl Huyett, the founder of this branch of the family in America, arrived in Philadelphia on September 7, 1738, in the ship "Glasgow," from Rotterdam, Holland. This vessel was under the command of Captain Walter Sterling and carried 349 passengers. Huyett was thirty at the time and was married.

Born in 1708 of French Huguenot blood, this colonial ancestor was from Zweibrucken in the Palatinate, which had become for a time a place of refuge for the harried religious minorities of that day.

Zweibrucken is within a few miles of the French border and was then a free city and politically not a part of any German state. Because of its liberal spirit and its proximity to France, many French families, fugitives for conscience sake, fled to this community, abandoning their property and their homeland to escape persecution after the Revocation of the Edict of Nantes in 1685. The Palatinate in the Rhine River Valley and a few of the North German states, chief of which was Brandenburg, the dominion of the humane Frederick William, the great Elector, received in great numbers the Huguenot migrations, an exodus that resulted from the ill-advised policies of Louis XIV. However, the emigres who had settled in the Palatinate found to their dismay that their asylum was to be short lived. The nearness of that coveted territory to the realm of the French king made it an object of barbaric devastation ordered by Louvais and sanctioned by Louis XIV. In the words of Henry M. Baird, author of "The Huguenots," "The dispersion of that once flourishing Huguenot settlement scattered the survivors far and wide through Germany, Holland, and England."

During the same period many Huguenot families, representing the best French element, came to America, settling in Virginia, Charleston, S. C., New Rochelle, N. Y., Boston and Salem, Mass., and in Pennsylvania in the Schuylkill and Oley Valleys.

To practice in peace and security their religious convictions, to live more independently, and to better their material fortunes, Franz Carl and his wife, like countless other colonists, braved the long and hazardous passage of the Atlantic to find a home in Penn's land, famed abroad for its tolerance toward all peoples and equally noted for its fertility of soil. They came with high hopes. Yet, in a measure, as seasoned refugees, they doubtless were aware of the great distance between the real and the ideal. None the less the first Huyetts would, undoubtedly, consider themselves fortunate to be among those who would be able to exchange the persecutions and intolerance of the European scene for the hardships and perils of the American frontier. Unlimited opportunities for personal achievement and happiness would be the reward.

Though landing on a foreign shore, Franz Carl, possibly, did not feel a complete stranger in the New World, because his older brother, Peter, born 1702, had emigrated from the Protestant colony at Rotterdam the year before, arriving April 30, 1737. One can imagine that the brothers would greet each other that September day on the dock at the port of old Philadelphia and with eager questions inquire about their friends and kindred. Perhaps, too, Peter remained with his brother for a time in Penn's green country town to acquaint the new comer with the unfamiliar customs and to urge him to make his home in Berks County where he had located. It was well known that on the thinly populated frontier the land was to be had for the tilling and farmer pioneers were eager for neighbors. Be that as it may, with unbounded optimism the younger brother of an independent and a self-reliant strain was willing to adjust to the new environment in his own time and manner.

As a recently arrived immigrant, a foreigner, speaking English yet imperfectly and evidently without a trade or a profession of use in the new world, Franz Carl first secures work as an operator of a ferry for foot passengers, bound across the Schuylkill River in Philadelphia. It is of interest to note that this ferry was situated on High Street, now Market Street, where the Thirtieth Street Station of the Pennsylvania Railroad stands.

Remaining at this occupation but a short time, this Huguenot ancestor then traveled up the Schuylkill Valley, along a river with which he had necessarily become well-acquainted to Berks County, (then in Philadelphia County) where his brother Peter lived and where another younger brother Michael later was to settle for his brief span of years. He purchased some land near the present city of Reading, and here his son Ludwig (Louis) was born January 7, 1739, the first child of the Huyett name born in America.

It is evident that the first wife of Franz Carl did not long survive her journey to this country. Among the records of the St. Michael's and Zion Lutheran Church of Philadelphia is a reference to the marriage of Franz Carl Huyett to Gertrude Quattlebaun, March 7, 1746.

To this second marriage a number of children were born: Johan Jacob, Martin, Dietrich, and Nicholas, and several daughters whose identities are unknown. The oldest child of this union, Johan Jacob, was born November 30, 1748, and baptized in St. Michael's and Zion Church in Philadelphia, December, 1748.

The second son, Martin, settled, tradition says, with his family near the Pennsylvania-New York border in the eastern section of this state.

Another son, Dietrich, as captain of his company, was killed in the massacre at Wyoming, Pennsylvania, in July, 1778.

In connection with the death of Dietrich is this incident based on family tradition. When Congress somewhat belatedly learned that a horde of Tories and Indians were coming into the Wyoming Valley to kill the people and to burn their homes, the captain was one of the officers commissioned to recruit men for a defense of the district. He was faithful in the fulfillment of his duty. With but a tragically short time for preparation and an inadequate force, he and his men attempted valiantly but futilely to check an overwhelming and savage enemy. The entire company, officers and men, was lost.

The fourth son, Nicholas, born in Berks County in 1751, was enrolled in Washington's army at Valley Forge in the winter of 1777-1778, and further served in the War for Independence as a Private in Captain Adam Ott's Company of Select Militia of Washington County, Maryland. Nicholas, who wrote his surname in the anglicized form as "Hewit," married Elizabeth Gearhart, born 1780, and reared a large family in Shaver's Creek Valley, Huntingdon County, where he had settled after the war. He died May 30, 1835, and was buried at Manor Hill, Shaver's Creek Valley, Huntingdon County, Pa.

We return to the first generation of Huyetts in Pennsylvania. In spite of the exposed condition of the Pennsylvania frontier which lay open to imminent Indian attack at the time of the French and Indian War, Franz Carl and his brother, Peter, in a spirit of adventure one day left Berks County and journeyed south across the Susquehanna River and through the Pennsylvania backwoods into Maryland. Here they found a beautiful valley with a rich soil. It is thought that Franz Carl remained and made his home near what is now Cavetown in Washington County, then Frederick County, Maryland. Peter returned to Berks County to become a neighbor of the Lincolns and the Boones.

As a resident of Exeter township, Berks County, Peter Huyett, an enterprising pioneer, helped to organize the county, reared a large family and left many descendants.

One of his sons, George, born October 6, 1747, lost his life in the Battle of Germantown in October, 1777, where he was serving as an officer in the Continental Army.

Regarding the death of Peter family tradition has this to say. As was the Pennsylvania Huyett's custom, he frequently visited his brother Franz Carl at his home in Maryland, traveling on horseback over a lonely but well-known route. On one of the return trips from Cavetown, about 1755, he failed to complete the journey to his home, disappearing without a trace. One assumption is that on the boulder-impeded section of the wilderness path his horse stumbled, throwing him fatally to the rocky ground; another conjecture is that on the little-frequented trail, a wandering band of hostile Indians from ambush attacked and scalped him.

The younger brother of Franz Carl Huyett, Michael, was born in 1719, emigrated to England where he remained for about ten years, then came to America. He arrived October 7, 1741, and subsequently settled in Exeter township, Berks County. During the French and Indian War, he marched with General Braddock's army on its ill-fated expedition to Fort Duquesne in July, 1755, and was one of those killed in the ambushade.

CHAPTER III

A PIONEER HUYETT IN MARYLAND

Ludwig, the only son of Franz Carl Huyett by his first wife, who was his companion on the flight from Europe and on the voyage across the Atlantic, lived out his long life in the community which his father had known as a pioneer. However, the earliest evidence of Ludwig's settling in Maryland as a permanent citizen is the recorded deed for a tract of land, purchased in 1774, in Frederick County, which then included Washington County, Maryland.¹

When he was a young man, Ludwig, as he was christened, but Louis, as he was not infrequently called, made his filial visits to his father's kindred in Berks County, Pennsylvania. Traveling northward through the Cumberland Valley, he met on one of these journeys the girl who became his wife, Margaretta Potter, the daughter of Captain John Potter, of Franklin County, one of the earliest settlers on the Cumberland frontier. It is said that she was of the same family as that of General Potter of Revolutionary fame.

During the war with Britain, Louis Huyett, a patriot, believed sturdily in national independence, having little reason to care for kings. Although he did not serve as an active campaigner at the time of the conflict, he, nevertheless, did his duty for the American cause by word and deed. Since he was a prosperous farmer, he was commissioned, family tradition says, by General George Washington to grow wheat, rye, and corn on his plantation and to grind the grain in his mill for the use of the continental army.

After the Revolution Louis Huyett continued fortunate in his business ventures so that by 1785 he had become a substantial property owner in Washington County, Maryland. A deed dated that year indicated that he was becoming a man of affluence. The next decade saw him holding title to a large tract of land in Huntingdon County, Pa., a tract consisting of five hundred and fifty acres of cleared and timbered land, lying a few miles south of Alexandria. These holdings were later increased by the Huyett family to include a large part of Warrior's Ridge.

In 1799 Louis (Ludwig) Huyett bought an estate of four hundred and thirty acres in his native Maryland. The plantation, situated at the foot of South Mountain in a fertile and well-watered valley, lay about six miles east of Hagerstown and about two miles south of the village of Cavetown. This property he kept intact until his old age; when about 1811, he divided it into two sections, selling equal parts to his sons, Jacob and Daniel. Daniel's descendants as late as 1951 still own all of their portion, while Jacob's plantation with its handsome old stone house recently has come into the possession of others. The Pennsylvania estate, purchased in 1790, was deeded to his son John in 1809.² After a period of more than one hundred and sixty years "Stone Hall" is yet in the hands of the descendants of Ludwig Huyett and in the family name.

A word is said as to the personal characteristics of this early ancestor. Louis Huyett was a man of high integrity, of great energy and ability, possessing a good constitution that enabled him to live far beyond the Biblically allotted three score years and ten, dying in his ninetieth year. Even in his advanced years he enjoyed his daily rides on horseback. Furthermore, it is said that after these daily rides he always left his riding crop in the forks of a young shade tree which stood a few feet from the front door of his home. The light weight of the riding crop and his act of putting it there were sufficient to cause a branch of the tree to grow out an unusual angle. Today this tree, a huge spreading giant, claimed to be one of the largest trees in Washington County, may be seen with a lower branch sweeping sharply away from the trunk.

A religious man, he became an active member of the Reformed church in Cavetown, a church to which he and his family were faithful adherents. However, being a citizen of a southern state, and considering slavery an economic necessity, Ludwig, and both of his sons, owned a number of slaves. Some of the slave cabins of brick construction may yet be seen at the old homestead of Daniel Huyett and also at the nearby Jacob Huyett home where they were built of lime stone.

"The Willows" the mellow old brick house built in 1810, on Ludwig's plantation, originally called "Huyett Meadows" has pleasing lines and stands today in excellent condition, bearing witness to the good taste and simple architectural plan indicative of our forefathers. The interior of the house with its spacious rooms and deep fireplaces contains many mementos of the early Huyetts. On the walls hang the family portraits, ancient pieces of silver grace the sideboard, and some superior examples of colonial furniture made, in all probability, by the local cabinet makers of old Maryland as well as by the more fashionable workers in wood of Philadelphia show evidence of care, of the respect for tradition, and appreciation for gracious living that is apparent in this family.

Louis Huyett, who was born near Reading, Pa., January 7, 1739; died April 17, 1828, at the home of his son Jacob, who at the time of the War of 1812 was a captain in the state militia. Mrs. Huyett, born February 1, 1752; died February 21, 1833. They are buried in the family plot of the Reformed Church cemetery at Cavetown, Washington County. The gravestones are still standing, badly weatherworn, but with the lettering discernable.

The children of Louis (Ludwig) and Margaretta Huyett of Maryland are the following:

1. John, born September 11, 1772; died April 12, 1833.
2. Elizabeth, born December 10, 1778; died March 6, 1827.
3. Margaretta, born March 12, 1781; died July 29, 1865.
4. Jacob, born October 16, 1783; died October 8, 1840.
5. Daniel, born June 10, 1786; died May 14, 1869.
6. Mary, born April 2, 1789; died July 27, 1874.

CHAPTER IV

"STONE HALL" AND ITS BUILDER

One of the fine old manor houses in Huntingdon County is "Stone Hall", the homestead of the Huyett family located in Hartslog Valley a few miles south of Alexandria. Completed in 1812 and built of what is termed hammer-dressed stone, conscientiously cut and laid; its flat-arched windows and doorways give evidence of the early days of the Republic when stone houses, at first a rarity in the wilderness, began to replace the log cabins of the locality's pioneer residents. Constructed in the colonial manner, rectangular in form, the two storied house contains eleven rooms; its striking features are the three chimneys obscured within the walls until, at the gable ends, they emerge of enormous size above the roof.

The builder of "Stone Hall", John Huyett, Sr., known as Major Huyett, was a man of talent, for he was a mechanic, an architect, and a public spirited citizen. In the late summer of 1812 he moved with his growing family from the log house, which they had been occupying some dozen years, near a never-failing spring into the generously proportioned house, erected of limestone quarried on the place. In keeping with its effective simplicity and innate dignity he gave to the new home the place-name "Stone Hall," by which it is known today.

Family tradition says that he drew the plans for the house and that he made the hardware used in its construction — the hinges on the shutters and doors, the nails, as well as the latches and locks which are considered collectors' items today.

With its well-proportioned windows, equally spaced, and central doorway, the old manor house is a model of clean, straight craftsmanship. Expressing somewhat the style of the Federal period by the purity of design in the entrance front and by the paneling of the doors, and betraying signs of the builder's Maryland origin in the general plan, by the use of masonry, and by such details as the small, square, gable windows, and the gallery, side porch, the house is a notable example of the early nineteenth century architecture in Central Pennsylvania.

He had an eye for pleasant country surroundings. The front of the house faces south with wide outlook over garden and tilled fields to the distant Warrior's Ridge. In a picturesque setting of shrubbery and shade trees, the dwelling with its soft-gray limestone walls, well weathered, and the low-pitched, sloping roofs blends in harmony with the rolling landscape of the country side.

After a lapse of almost a century and a half, "Stone Hall" is in excellent condition. Many of the original panes, tinted by time, remain in the colonial windows, and the quaint bull's-eye glass yet conveys the light through the transom over the front doorway. Time, as well as the innovator, has dealt gently with the house, which, in its sturdy grace, retains much of the atmosphere of a bygone age. Practically unchanged since construction it bears witness to the skill and good taste of the builder.

Upon entering the homestead one sees by the deep-set windows how thick are the outer walls, said to measure twenty-four inches. Seven of the spacious rooms contain great fireplaces with chimney pieces of unusual size. A wide, hospitable hall runs through the house leading into a separate wing that at one time was an oldtime farm kitchen which was used in an earlier day as a winter living room. A principal feature of the kitchen was the "walk-in" fireplace; the cavernous opening supported by a massive log of oak which was faced by a simply molded mantel. Today, as a matter of convenience this area of the house is partitioned into two rooms, making a kitchen and a dining room for the present owner, Norman Huyett, a great-grandson of the original builder.

In the main part of the house on either side of the center hallway are two rooms with the parlor of pleasing dimensions being the largest of the four rooms in this wing. From the hall a broad staircase, having a graceful, slender balustrade and comfortably low treads, well-lighted by a deepset window on the landing, ascends to the second story into a narrow corridor. Opening from this passage way are two commodious bedrooms at the front of the house and two in the rear. The second floor was planned without a long and draughty upper hall in order to obtain the maximum of comfort during the cold winter days when the rooms were heated by the blazing logs in the fireplaces.

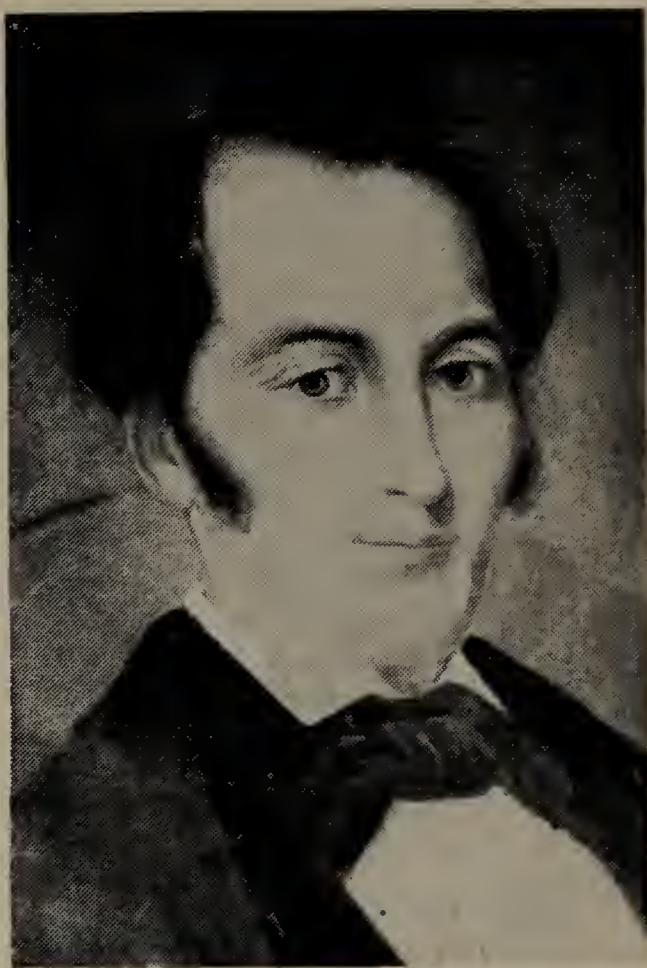

Major Huyett, born September 11, 1772, was the son of Louis and Margaretta (Potter) Huyett of "Huyett Meadows" near Hagerstown, Maryland, and the grandson of Franz Carl Huyett, the French Huguenot, who emigrated to America in 1738 from the Protestant colony at Zweibrucken in the Palatinate, and settled in Washington County, Maryland.

In 1795 he left his father's plantation and came to Huntingdon County to take possession of the lands which had been deeded to his father in 1790 by Benjamin Chew and which were from the original holdings of Richard and Thomas Penn. (This time-yellowed Penn deed, dated 1763 and bearing the seal of George III, is still held by the Huyett family) On September 11, 1797 he was married by the Reverend John Johnston, the well-known Presbyterian clergyman, to Elizabeth Grove, who in that year had come with her brother Jacob Grove from Lancaster County.

John Huyett, Sr., served his community as a county commissioner in 1807, and was appointed treasurer of Huntingdon County in 1812, and was one of the original officers of what is now the Alexandria Reformed church. In 1829 he joined with his son-in-law, John K. Neff of Williamsburg, one of the early ironmasters, to form the firm of Huyett & Neff. This firm bought the mill property which was established by the Ake family and which was near the large spring in that town and engaged in milling, merchandising, and “arking”. (Arks were a type of boat used for floating produce to the eastern markets at the time of high waters.)

The Major died April 12, 1833, and was buried in Hart’s Log Valley in the Huyett cemetery, which was at that time part of the family estate and which remained the burial ground for several generations. Mrs. Huyett, who was born March 4, 1782, and who survived her husband some twelve years, died February 18, 1845.

Later in the century Mr. Neff was made head of the firm of Neff, Dean & Co. who in 1857 built the Juniata iron furnace at Williamsburg. It was through this firm that the Rome iron manufacturing company of Georgia came into existence. On January 3, 1868, he organized and became president of the Williamsburg Manufacturing Company which had as its object: "To manufacture iron pig metal, flour and feed, agricultural and household implements, woolen and cotton goods, and fire and other kinds of brick." The property the company acquired, a development of the Huyett & Neff purchase, is described as follows: "About four acres of land in the village of Williamsburg and the large spring of water which runs through said village or town and lots numbered in said village of Williamsburg, and on which are erected a grist mill for the manufacture of flour and feed; also a furnace for the manufacture of iron pig metal with the necessary fixtures, a number of dwelling houses and other buildings and other real estate, rights and property"*

At the formation of Blair County in 1846, Mr. Neff was elected the first county commissioner, serving from 1846 through 1849. He died at Williamsburg, December 20, 1876, and was buried in the Neff family lot in the Presbyterian cemetery.

PART 3

Colonel John Huyett of "Stone Hall" and His Descendants

In J. Simpson Africa's well-known work on the history of Huntingdon and Blair Counties is featured a biographical sketch of Col. John Huyett, a part of which is herein given.

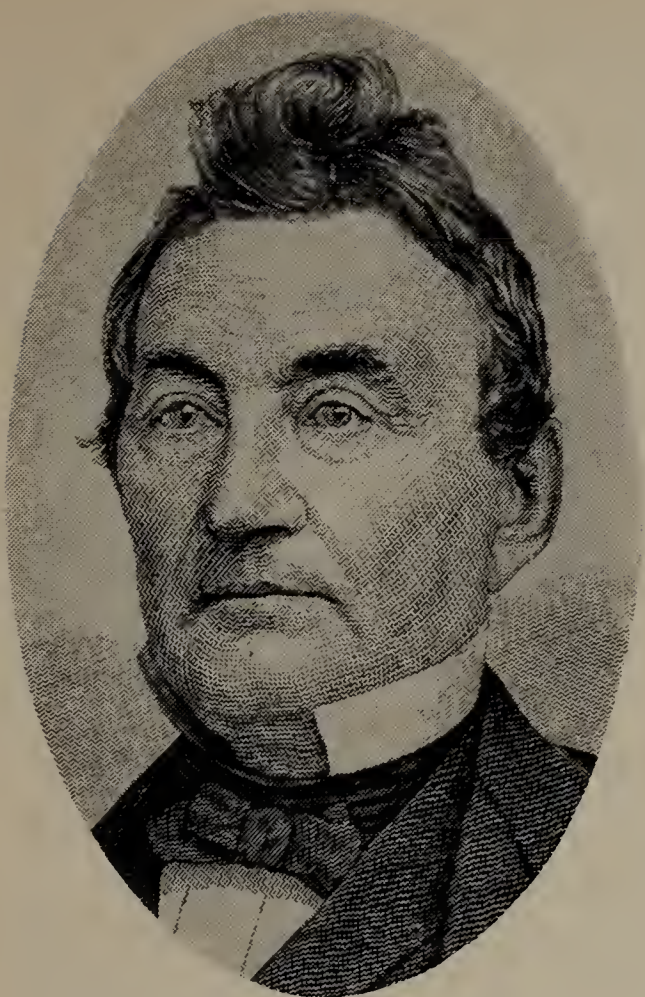

"The colonel was born in Porter Township, Huntingdon Co., Pa., October 9, 1808. His father, John Huyett Sr., came in 1795 to 'Hart's Log Valley', when eighteen years of age, to take possession of the lands, then comparatively a wilderness, which his father had purchased for him, and which were deeded to Louis Huyett, from the Penn holdings. He cleared out portions of his extensive lands and built a log cabin where 'Stone Hall' now stands, and close by the large and beautiful spring that all through the long years since has never ceased to pour forth in abundance its cold sweet waters.

This home, though so humble, soon came to be a favorite resort for young and old. From Maryland many young cavaliers and joyous maidens came in parties on horseback, up through what they used to call the 'backwoods of Pennsylvania', ostensibly for sport and to visit friends in Huntingdon County, but often more truly, perhaps to look out homes for themselves, when for them 'the time of wooing over, they should wedded be.' "

The Huyett home was the cynosure for these happy travelers, and it is told that the cabin, such was its capacity, never overflowed.

In 1812, "Stone Hall" was built, and here Mr. and Mrs. John Huyett, Sr., lived until they died, he in 1833, and she in 1845. Within its great old kitchen, spacious halls, and delightful shades grew up seven happy children to manhood and womanhood, four of them, Mary, Jacob, William, and John, crossed now to the other side; three of them, Susan, Catherine, and Joseph, spared yet to come on occasional pilgrimages, joyful or sad, to the old home, until for them too, the evening shadows fall and the journey ends.

On the death of his father, "Stone Hall" and its lands became the possession of Col. Huyett, and with the exception of three years — 1851-53 passed at Neff's Mills, West Township, he always lived at the "Stone Hall." He received the education afforded by the common schools of the day, but the colonel was always a great reader, and had "picked up" an education which enabled him intelligently to fill any position in life which he would accept. With the exception of the three years already mentioned, during which time he leased the farm, the colonel worked it himself. During the time he lived in West Township he was employed as contractor in the construction of railroads. He was interested in the ownership of steam saw-mills, situated on the Racetown Branch of the Juniata River and at Fostoria (the first steam saw-mills of the county), supplying in large quantities timber and lumber for the canal and railroads. These enterprises did not always prove a success financially; on the contrary, he was a heavy loser thereby.

BUILT IN 1812 BY MAJOR JOHN HUYETT OF MARYLAND

His last venture in the building of railroads was on the West Pennsylvania, now a division of the Pennsylvania Railroad. The firm of Huyett & Seeds was among the heaviest contractors. The original company becoming involved and unable to pay, the contractors were heavy losers, the colonel losing over eighty thousand dollars in that undertaking. This retired him again to private life on the farm. He was always progressive. He was the first to introduce grain-reapers into this part of the State, about the year 1847. Reapers were then in their primitive state, requiring four horses to draw them, going always at a full trot to do good work, and farmers coming from ten to twenty miles to see the wonderful machine.

In politics the colonel was identified first with the Whig party, but united with the Republican party at its organization, and to the end of his life was one of its most active supporters. He has filled various town offices, and was at one time the candidate of his party for the lower house of the State Legislature.

Col. Huyett was for many years a member of the orders of Freemasons and Odd-Fellows. (At the organization of the Alexandria Reformed Church in 1849 he was one of the original trustees.)

He was a natural mechanic, and it is said of him he could manufacture almost any tool or mechanical device which he found occasion to use.

He possessed many qualities of mind and heart that greatly endeared him to his fellow-men. He was generous and hospitable, ever willing to help a friend in need; the poor especially turned to him not in vain. He was eminently social, and was a delightful companion. He was all his life passionately fond of music, was a sweet singer, and played well on the violin. His violin seemed a solace to him; his attachment for it was touching. Often rising in the morning before his family, he spent an hour in playing the tunes of the olden time. During his last illness, and while a great sufferer, he called for his favorite instrument, but after drawing the bow feebly for a few times he laid it aside, as it proved forever.

His last days, though days of suffering, were peaceful. In the bosom of his family, fondly cherished and tenderly waited on, his reason and memory unclouded, he saw the end draw near and feared it not. To his pastor, family, and friends he frequently expressed his entire trust in Jesus Christ as his complete Saviour. To his physician who on the last day of his life announced to him he had but a few hours longer to suffer, he said, "I am ready". Calmly and sweetly he breathed his last on Sunday morning at seven o'clock, March 12, 1882, aged seventy-three years, five month, and three days."

(IV) (D) COL. JOHN HUYETT married Anna Catharine Harnish, November 25, 1834.

Mrs. Anna (Harnish) Huyett, born January 8, 1817; died January 15, 1902, was the daughter of Samuel (1788-1839) and Susanna (1796-1881) (Keller) Harnish, and the granddaughter of Christian and Catharine (Neumann) Harnish, early settlers of Morris Township, Huntingdon County.

Mrs. Huyett's maternal grandfather was John Keller, the Revolutionary veteran, who lived to be ninety-nine years of age and is buried in the Keller churchyard, Canoe Valley, Blair County, Pa. Family tradition says he was six feet six inches in height and was known by the sobriquet of "Long John". On October 4, 1772, he was married by the Rev. John Waldschmidt of the Cocalico Reformed Church, Lancaster County to Dorrothea Rub, born 1753; died March 8, 1833, the daughter of Johannes Rub. ¹

John Keller, born 1732; died March 1, 1831, was the son of Martin Keller and saw service in the American Revolution as a Private, 1st Class, in the 6th Co. 3rd Battalion, Lancaster County Militia, Cocalico Township, commanded by Col. George Feathers and Capt. Michael Oberly. He is listed on the Muster roll prepared as of May 23, 1781. ²

(V) 1. SAMUEL LOUIS HUYETTE married Vaneeta Lee Russell in 1870.

12. Paul Burton, born April 9, 1871; died January 13, 1938.

Mrs. Vaneeta Russell Huyette, born April 1, 1853; died May 26, 1928, was the daughter of James Russell, of Sinking Valley, Blair County, Pa., and Amelia Mary (Baker) Russell, of Carlisle, Pa.

During the years of 1849 and 1851 Captain Samuel L. Huyette attended an academy at Williamsburg, Pa. From 1853 until 1856 he was a bookkeeper for the firm of Huyett & Seeds, Blairsville, Pa., railroad contractors for the West Pennsylvania railroad. From 1857 until 1861 he taught the district school near his home in Hart's Log Valley.

In August, 1861, Captain Huyette recruited a company of Huntingdon County boys and was mustered in as captain of Company D., 110th Pennsylvania Volunteers, August 23, 1861 and participated in the battles of Kernstown, Port Royal, Port Republic, Cedar Mountain, Winchester, Strawberry Plain, Second Bull Run and Fredericksburg, Va. He resigned December 20, 1862 and recruited a cavalry company. He was mustered in as 1st Lieutenant Co. A., 19th Pennsylvania Cavalry; promoted to Captain of Co. M., Oct., 1863, and Jan. 26, 1865 was transferred to Co. F., was in the command of Headquarters Escort Brigadier General Wilson. In the battle of Nashville, Tenn. Captain Huyette had two horses shot from under him, and one in another battle in which he took part.

He was with the cavalry at Gravelly Springs, Miss., the base of operations against General Forrest's cavalry, saw service in the fighting at Gunstown, Holly Springs and other minor engagements at Salem and Mobile, Alabama. When the war ended, the 19th Cavalry was sent to the Mexican Border, under General Sheridan, for observations of French operations in Mexico, and, if necessary, to enforce the principles of the Monroe Doctrine. When Maximilian, the Emperor, of Mexico, was assassinated and the French withdrew from the country, the cavalry was distributed on the Western Plains for patrol against hostile Indians.

Captain Huyette was mustered out May 14, 1866, after nearly five years of continuous service.

An item worthy of note in this connection is that during the years of cavalry service, "Toby", a fine black horse from his father's farm, was his inseparable companion. This noble animal, a thoroughbred, carried his master through many a hot skirmish and heavy engagement, traversing thousands of miles through the states of Kentucky, Tennessee, Mississippi, Alabama, Louisiana, and Texas. His bones now lie bleaching along the bayous of the lower Mississippi.

The Captain returned to his home "Stone Hall" the latter part of 1866, bringing with him a young, colored boy named "Jack", whom he had befriended. As a faithful servant, "Jack" remained with Captain Huyette for many years.

From the time of the closing of the Civil War until 1873, the Captain cultivated one of his father's farms. For twenty years he was in the service of the Pennsylvania Railroad, Altoona, Pa., as Assistant Storekeeper, Car Shops Division. During the last years of his life he was associated in business with his son in Philadelphia as vice-president of The Paul B. Huyette Co., manufacturing engineering appliances. He died June 30, 1917, and is buried in West Laurel Hill Cemetery, Philadelphia, Pa.

The mill and the residence, as well as other buildings which had been purchased by Mr. Whittaker's grandfather, John Whittaker, in 1803, were one time landmarks on the banks of the Juniata River about a mile above Huntingdon. The only evidence of the site remaining today is the mill race which parallels the river. The ground is now owned by the Pennsylvania State Institution.

As a youth William A. Whittaker attended the Huntingdon Academy; then taught school for several terms in Hartslog Valley. During the Civil War he enlisted in 1862 as a private in Company D, 131st Regiment, Pennsylvania Volunteers and was wounded at the battle of Fredericksburg. After five months in the hospital at Washington, D. C., he was discharged with his regiment and returned to his home in McVeytown. He then took up the study of dentistry, and after his marriage practiced his profession in Hollidaysburg. He later came to Altoona, where he located his office and home on Twelfth Avenue near the corner of Eleventh Street.

CAPTAIN S. L. HUYETTE
United States Army

"HUYETT MEADOWS"

Ludwig Huyett's home in his later years; where his children had their family gatherings and where he died in 1828.

Among the interesting architectural details of the house are the gallery side porch, facing the southeast, and the classically designed doorway, a characteristic of the Federal times, when this Huyett home was built. A striking feature of the entrance hallway is the gracefully curved staircase which leads to the upper floors.

“THE WILLOWS”

“THE WILLOWS”

The Daniel Huyett home in Maryland, called “The Willows,” was built in 1810 on the tract of land which was originally purchased by Ludwig Huyett and which became known as “Huyett Meadows.” The estate is owned today by his descendants in the fifth generation.

The landscaped grounds about the house contain some fine old shade trees, shrubbery that was planted by those who once lived here, and a garden that grows the old-fashioned flowers; the moss rose, hollyhocks, and the pinks are there in abundance — all highly esteemed by the early-American gardener.

William Steel, Recorder

The following letter of genealogical import was written to Captain and Mrs. Samuel L. Huyette by Dr. Joseph Huyette of Milan, Illinois. Dr. Huyette was the brother of Col. John Huyett of "Stone Hall."

June 12, 1904

My dear Niece & Nephew,

Your late favor duly received. I could not tell you how much delighted I was to hear from you. No, I never forgot you and yours — the happy day my wife and I spent with you in Altoona. He was the oldest son of my favorite brother. I was sent for the Doctor to welcome the dear little child into this world and to see the first light of day. John always selected me for that job, as I was a fearless rider — infact I was never afraid of anything — rode in horse races when only a little boy. On time at the end of a race my mare jumped the bars leading into the orchard, and I was knocked off my horse by a big limb of an apple tree, senseless, was carried home and remained unconscious until the next day. That, however, did not stop me from entering riding races.

One night I was called out of bed to go for the doctor. I don't know now which one of the children was born at that time. The roads were a glitter of ice — rode a barefoot horse, went to Alexandria first, and then to McConnellstown. After I got back without success in Alexandria; the night was dark; my horse fell as quick as if he had been shot — a number of times — but that was nothing, for I was used to it.

Ludwig (or Louis) Huyett was born near Reading, Pa., died April 17, 1828; duration of life 38 years, 7 mos. and 6 days; consequently was born in 1739 on the 11th day of September, was married to Miss Margaret, daughter of John Potter, Franklin County, Pa., just across the line between Washington Co. Md. and Franklin County, Pa. Their children John, Jacob, Daniel, Elizabeth (married Trittle), Mary (married Knode), Margaret (married Hogmeier) and later married John Swope of McConnellstown, when they were both past the meridian of human life; he died and left her a widow again, and she died at "Stone Hall" at a round old age. Brother John's wife took the very best care of her.

APPENDIX

Ludwig, my father and I were all three born on the 11th of September; both married on the 11th; we were married on the 10th of September — the reason was that the 11th was on a Friday and was a noted day of the week for Negroes in marriages, and the other fellow — my wife — not agreed to it.

Ludwig's brothers were all in the War of the Revolution. Detric Huyett commanded a company at the Massacre of Wyoming and when he was ordered to stop firing — at the time terms of surrender were about concluded — replied, "He would be damned if he would." His whole company and himself were killed.

Nicholas Huyett, (Hewitt) Shavers Creek, brother of Louis or Ludwig, moved out to Huntingdon County. I saw him often when I was a child. He used to come to our house and stay for several weeks, a very nice old man. Father helped him to pay for his property, a beautiful, large farm. Most of his family were full-grown and some of them gray-headed when I was only a small boy. His limbs were badly crippled by rheumatism acquired in camp one horrible winter when General Washington's army was encamped at Valley Forge. He was in that army during the winter.

I saw in a book in Pennsylvania, while I was there two years ago, that Ludwig (Louis) emigrated from France, but that is absolutely untrue; his father came from Alsace, very poor. A brother with him started a ferry for foot men across the Schuylkill river in Philadelphia and got a little start. He bought a piece of land near Reading. His brother settled there and was the great ancestor of all the New York Huyetts (Hewitts), as Ludwig's father was the ancestor of the Pennsylvanian Huyetts. The reason Ludwig was not in the Revolution was that General Washington would not agree to his enlisting, but wanted him to grow all the wheat, rye, and corn he could and grind it for the army — as he had a big farm opened up under cultivation and a mill and was therefore just the man to do good in that way.

I believe what I have stated is correct. I got my information from Aunt Peggy, Uncle Daniel Huyett, and a daughter of John Potter, who died here in Milan about forty years ago, about 80 years old.

Uncle Doctor

The following newspaper account of a bear hunt was found among the Huyett papers and concerns an episode that occurred when Col. Huyett and his family were living at Neff's Mills during the years 1851-1853. Henry Neff was a nephew, the son of his sister Polly, who had married Daniel K. Neff of Alexandria.

The Hewitts mentioned are presumably of the Nicholas Hewitt family, distant relatives of the Colonel, while John Eberle, the author of this sketch is, undoubtedly, the grandson of Nicholas Hewitt, the Revolutionary veteran of Manor Hill.

A Bear Hunt

Thirty years ago or more Col. John Huyett of Hartslog Valley moved with his family to Henry Neff's Mills, on Shaver's Creek, Huntingdon Co. Pa.

A P P E N D I X

One morning the Colonel came over to get me to go hunting. We went up in Diamond Valley and hunted till about two o'clock when the Colonel jumped up four deer, one buck, a doe and two fawns. They came past me about ten steps distant, fairly flying, but I did not shoot. I then called the Colonel; he came and looked after the doe and fawns. I then said to the Colonel that I would go out to Ewing's path, and I started on the first bench of Tussey mountain hunting slowly. I saw a bear and three cubs coming straight toward me, walking very fast. Thinks I now there's going to be some fun. I put my gun up to my face slowly, when the old bear was about forty yards from me, drew a bead on her head, but she walked too fast, and in two or three steps she angled to the left but still holding the gun on her, when she came opposite to me about twenty steps distant I took her behind the shoulders. She snapped back at the bullet hole, and I then turned the other barrel and broke a cap at one of the cubs. By that time the old lady was down and up and very sick. I then reloaded and capped. By that time she had got down the mountain opposite to me, and when about sixty yards away I shot her through the body again and then stuck her. I then watched for the cubs and saw them several times but could not get a shot at them. Night came on and I went home, saw the Colonel that night and the next morning Charlie Wolverton, his farmer, took two horses and the sled and went for the old bear.

We took the old bear to the Colonel's stopping at our house for our folks to see bruin. James Hewitt, his sister Maggie, and their uncle and aunt from Washington County, Pa., were here on a visit. Uncle Hewitt went with the Colonel and I the next morning to hunt the cubs. As we passed Mrs. Boarst's I asked Wilson Boarst to go to Wilson town and get me a quart of whiskey. The Colonel said, "John, that was very sensible of you, I expect we will be very tired by the time we get home." When we came to the dead bear, we could see that the cubs had licked the blood clean from the bullet hole. We put the bear on the sled and then we put our Washington county Hewitt in the centre, Colonel on the left and I on the right, about one hundred yards apart, and hunted right straight to the top of old Tussey mountain. When I got up on the top I saw one of the cubs. I shot and missed it. It ran a few rods and stopped, by that time I had the other barrel turned, pulled up and took aim and this time Mr. Cubby run like he had got deadener. I began to load and hearing a curious noise found cubby dying and squealing like a stuck hog. He was about eighty yards away when I shot him, and after sticking him I called the Hewitts. They came and when the Colonel saw the bear he said, with that smiling face of his, "Well, John, you've done it again." We strung the cub on a pole; the two Hewitts carried him and I carried the three rifles. The cub only weighed thirty-five pounds when dressed. On the third day we took the half of the cub over to the Colonel, and we had a good, yes, a grand time. We had a reunion that lasted till the bear meat was all eaten. It was a great treat to the Washington county Hewitts.

The Colored Families Who Lived Near "Stone Hall"

In the early days one of the accustomed sights about old "Stone Hall," was the colored families who during the lifetime of Colonel Huyett lived nearby in their picturesque cabins. The Colonel was always kindly toward the Negroes and liked them, and had them employed on his farms. Some of these colored people, who, undoubtedly, originated from Washington County, Maryland, were on the place before the Civil War. Others came in afterwards, having followed the Federal armies north at the close of the war.

In a log cabin a short distance below the house lived Jerry Green, who was born in the deep South, became a Union soldier during the conflict, and at his death was buried in the Huyett graveyard.

Several hundred yards to the south of the house toward Warrior Ridge in a locust thicket lived one of the most interesting families of Negroes by the name of Willard, which consisted of two brothers and a sister: Amster, the oldest, Louis, and Henrietta. Louis, who was of a comical turn of mind, had as his chief aim in life the avoidance of work, terming himself a house Negro and referring somewhat contemptuously to his brother as a field hand. However, Louis did earn his living as a chimney sweep, traveling as far as Hollidaysburg on his rounds. Any extra cash he had always went for liquor with its accompanying spree. These periodical strayings into the primrose path annoyed old Mrs. Huyett who lectured him on his conduct and the waste of his money, and warned him about the reckoning in the hereafter. In answer he invariably made the same remark: "Mis' Huyett, its dis heah way. When ah drinks liklah, ahs as ne'r heav'n as ah gwine ta git." To see that the great chimneys in the house were in good order and that the wood pile was amply stacked with well-trimmed logs ready for the huge fireplaces was his main duty about "Stone Hall." His sister Henrietta helped in the kitchen, and on Mondays presided over the laundry where a strong right arm was needed to wring out the clothes in a day when the mechanical wringer was yet little known. After the marriage of Caroline Huyett, one of her favorites, to William Whittaker, she transferred her services to the Whittaker family and was with them for many years.

At the bend of the road leading into the Huyett cemetery lived Basel Arms and his sturdy sons, who were among the most enterprising of the colored people. They were renowned throughout the valley for being efficient cradlers and dependable workmen. It was through Col. Huyett's generosity that they acquired title to a ten acre tract of land which included a small apple orchard and a woodlot — all originally part of the Huyette estate. This land the Arms cultivated industriously and at the turn of the century sold their holdings to advantage; then came to Altoona where one of the sons entered the barbering trade.

Near the foot of old Tussey along the mountain road lived Dorsey Morrell and his brood who were from time to time employed in the capacity of what would be known today as caterers. They were in attendance at large social functions, weddings, and funerals. In the same wooded section David Lear and "Old Annie" had their cabins. As laborers by the day, these two were familiar figures on the valley roads, walking to and from their day's work. "Old Annie" was of eccentric form, tall and gaunt, with her head inevitably tied up in a brightly colored bandana, a characteristic touch which led to the supposition that she was bald, and a story circulated that her hair had been burned off accidentally in her youth.

The Harnish Family of Canoe Valley

Christian Harnish, the first of the name in the upper Juniata Valley, came from Lancaster county about 1800. He was born in 1759 and died in Canoe Valley, May 9, 1839, at the age of seventy-nine. His wife was Catharine Neumann. Christian Harnish, who is said to have been a Revolutionary soldier, was the son of Samuel and the grandson of Jacob Harnish, the first American ancestor.

Christian Harnish had a son Samuel, who was born in 1788 and died Nov. 4, 1839, of typhoid fever which had also caused his father's death. He was buried in the churchyard of the Keller Reformed church, Fox Hollow, Canoe Valley. He left a widow Susanna (Keller) Harnish, thirteen children ranging from infancy to twenty-five years of age, and a heavy mortgage on the home farm. Mrs. Susanna Harnish was a woman of great courage, energy, and ability. She has become celebrated locally as a pioneer mother who reared all her children to maturity and saw them well-established in life. At the marriage of each of her children, she presented each one of them with three hundred dollars as a wedding gift. She died April 5, 1881 at the advanced age of eighty-five years and was buried in the Keller churchyard. Her funeral was one of the largest attended in that region. My father recalled how he, when he was a boy of seven, was taken by his father to this funeral of his great-grandmother, over the snow covered ground of that day in early spring, and how gracious and kindly were the innumerable aunts and cousins toward "Callie's boy."

The children of Samuel and Susanna (Keller) Harnish are the following:

1. Christian, married Maria Knode, of Alexandria and lived in Delaware.
2. John, married Elizabeth Crawford, of Sinking Valley.
3. Abraham, married Ann Eliza Neff.

APPENDIX

Citation commending the Cavalry Division under General Sturgis which took part in the battle of Gunstown, Mississippi against the Confederates under General Forrest. Captain S. L. Huyette was in command of Company M, 19th Pennsylvania Cavalry which participated in this engagement.

HEADQUARTERS CAVALRY DIVISION, 16th A. C.

Memphis, Tenn. June 16, 1864.

Officers and Soldiers of the Cavalry Division:

Your General congratulates you upon your noble conduct during the late expedition under Brigadier General S. D. Sturgis.

Fighting against overwhelming numbers, under most adverse circumstances, your prompt obedience to orders, and unflinching courage, commanding the admiration of all, made even defeat almost a victory. For hours, on foot, you repulsed the charges of the enemy's infantry, and again, in the saddle, you met his cavalry and turned his assaults into confusion.

Your heroic perseverance saved hundreds of your fellow soldiers from capture and inhuman treatment, from a barbarous foe.

You have been faithful to your honorable reputation, and have fully justified the confidence, and merited the high esteem of your commander.

B. H. GRIERSON, Brig. Gen'l

Con'd'g Cav. Div. 16th A. C.

Lieutenant David B. Spessard was awarded posthumously the Silver Star for gallantry in action on Okinawa. The account of this citation was taken from a Baltimore newspaper.

"Mrs. Mabel Bennett Spessard, 146 College Avenue, has been officially informed that her husband, Second Lieutenant David B. Spessard, who gave his life for his country at Okinawa on May 23 of this year, has been awarded the Silver Star for his gallantry. Lieutenant Spessard was a son of Mr. and Mrs. H. E. Spessard, long residents of this city.

The award was made at the direction of President Truman, as are all Silver Stars, and the citation which goes with it reveals that he lived up to the traditions of America's military annals, being wounded in the arm in a sacrificial venture, and yet killing two Japanese before a mortar shell fatally wounded him a second time."

The text of the citation says:

"For gallantry in action on Okinawa Shima on 23rd May 1945.

APPENDIX

"While an infantry company was advancing south toward Youabarū, Second Lieutenant Spessard's platoon came under intense enemy mortar and small arms fire. Disregarding his own safety, Second Lieutenant Spessard unhesitatingly led one squad to the top of the objective. During this action Lieutenant Spessard was wounded in the left arm by enemy machine gunfire, but, rather than withdraw for treatment, he remained in his precarious position and directed the enemy machine gun automatic rifle fire which reduced the enemy machine gun emplacement. Despite the intensity of the enemy fire and the painful condition of his arm, Second Lieutenant Spessard then directed the rest of this platoon into position. In the ensuing action, Second Lieutenant Spessard personally killed two of the enemy before he, himself, was mortally wounded by mortar fire. His personal bravery and gallant action inspired his men to such a degree that they held their positions, delivering effective fire on the enemy until other friendly elements were able to outflank the enemy and secure the hill."

Robert A. White, who was sent home from Okinawa has written to Mr. and Mrs. Spessard, the lieutenant's parents, giving some additional details. Official casualties had been severe in a tough fight and Lieutenant Spessard had volunteered for an exceptionally hazardous piece of work which called for great coolness and daring. The lieutenant "Went out fighting" which is the epitaph which many a soldier asks for. Said Captain White, "I talked to him just a few moments before he was hit and at the time he had everything under control. He was a mighty brave soldier and a true gentleman at all times."
